Lord Stratheona and Mount Royal Died at His Residence at 1.55 (London Time This Morning)

AGED HIGH COMMISSIONER PASSES PEACEFULLY AWAY

Had Sunk Gradually From an Early Hour Last Saturday Morning

SHOWED WONDERFUL ENERGY TO THE LAST

Was One of Greatest Men That the Dominion Has Produced

By Bulletin Leased Wire
LONDON, Jan. 21.—Canadian Associated Press.—Lord Stratheona died at 1.55 this morning.

The aged statesman's last moments were very quiet, and he passed away peacefully in his sleep.

His lordship's fatal illness was but short and it was realized from an early hour Saturday morning that he was sinking beyond recovery. An attack of catarrh which would have been a comparatively trifling matter for a man in the prime of life, was too severe a strain for him who had passed the four score and ten mark well over three years ago. The malady completely prostrated him, eventually inducing heart trouble. His lordship, the patient sank into a state of coma the end coming peacefully at an early hour this morning.

Lord Stratheona on several occasions in the last few years has been confined to his house for an odd day or two, but at such times despite his feeble condition, he would have always had confidence in his power to resist illness. Unhappily such a confidence could not be entertained on this last occasion.

Majority Was Present.
Hon. Mr. Howard, Lord Stratheona's only daughter, and to whom the title descends by royal patent, was present at the end as were other members of the family. The house at 28 Grosvenor avenue was besieged by inquirers as to the venerable statesman's condition, the king and queen being solicited and with other members of the royal family made repeated inquiries.

When the death notice was finally posted, expressions of sympathy were received by hundreds from all sections of London's aristocracy, the press, the church, and the people. Lord Stratheona's death has been one of the most striking events of the year, and for nearly twenty years back has been described as the greatest old man, until the phrase became almost a cliché in reference to him.

OFFERS ELECTRIC POWER TO CITY AT 9-10ths CENT K.W.H.

This is Proposal Placed Before City Council Last Night—Letter is Filed on Ousting Vote of Mayor—It is Expected That More Will be Heard of Offer During Next Few Weeks

With an offer to supply the city with electric power at a cost on nine-tenths of a cent per Kilowatt Hour, as compared to the price of 2 cents per K.W.H. now charged by the city's power plant on its lowest schedule, H. H. Deault, representing the Edmonton Power company, a new organized concern, appeared before the city council last night.

He received scant encouragement, however, as the council, on the deciding vote of Mayor McNamee, decided to file the offer and the accompanying agreement, and so to have nothing more to do with it.

Mr. Deault, in a very brief outline of his offer to the council and in conversation with a Bulletin reporter at the close of the meeting, gave these facts in connection with the proposal. The Edmonton Power company is composed of local as well as outside investors. The intention is to locate a power plant at the mouth of a coal mine—just where was not stated—by which coal could be obtained at from 80 cents to $1 per ton. The estimated cost of the power plant and transmission line is $850,000. Mr. Deault offered to place $50,000 at the disposal of the council to be used for investigation purposes. The company would put up a bond of $50,000 if the agreement was considered. It also undertook to sell no stock.

"I placed the proposition before the council," said Mr. Deault, "and I am sure that the council will be able to produce power at that price."

In the proposed agreement the company guarantees to supply 25,000 K.W.H. per year at 3 cents per K.W.H. and over that amount at eight-tenths of a cent. Last year the output of the city's plant was 2,500,000 K.W.H. The company also offers to supply 100,000 K.W.H. per year at 25 cents, and 2,000 K.W.H. from 12 p.m. until 4 p.m.

"I don't think we should allow a five-cent and a theatre like the Lyceum to have one, which looks like it was going to fall down anyway," declared Alderman Chalmers, who approved of these charges elsewhere on other buildings.

"This is the Lyceum; that thing ought to be burned down," explained Alderman Chalmers, when the application was made.

"What is the objection to this plan of a theatre over the entrance to a building?" the mayor wanted to know.

LORD STRATHCONA PASSES AWAY WHILE ASLEEP

street daily, arriving at 10 o'clock in the evening and remaining until after midnight. The Canadian official in fact, had been in the city since the vicinity "the light-house" through the window frequently looking out at the night after the last was in darkness. There is not the least doubt that when the window was closed, Lord Strathcona continued his activities even at such a venerable age as that of the nobleman who died at the Hudson's Bay Company's meeting last night.

A significant incident. Lord Strathcona, presiding, started reading at his speech, the document extending over several pages. His voice at starting, was perfectly clear, but gradually it weakened until it was a palatable strain followed the typewritten pages. The shareholders, too, became nervous, on finding the speaker becoming inaudible. Eventually the secretary suggested to Lord Strathcona his speech should be read for him. The aged chairman, however, indignantly brushed his aide and continued reading himself.

A few minutes later, though, he confessed to the audience that he was "tired" and resigned as chairman.

Energetic Again Next Day. The next night, however, his lordship presided at the annual meeting and delivered a lengthy written speech, supplementing it by voluminous additions and remarks on the previous day's Hudson's Bay speech. The following day he was in the hands with 200 guests at a Dominion Day reception.

On the third birthday on August 4, he attended a private luncheon given by Senator Jaffray, president of the law firm, and the same week entertained the medical congress.

The home of Inverness at Strathcona was one of Lord Strathcona's best philanthropic efforts. He had inherited several thousand pounds to assist his maintenance. He also entertained the active and social life of Alexander and other high personages.

His lordship and his wife had a taste in charitable matters. His last public donation was a gift of $10,000 toward the public hospital at the Central Palace. Another recent gift was $10,000 to the Brotherhood of St. Andrew.

His Principal Residence. Lord Strathcona's principal residence was at 28 Grosvenor square, where he passed away. It was a comfortable but unpretentious home in a district populated by nobles. He also had a large estate at Inverness, Scotland, close to the scene of the famous massacre of 1746.

His lordship and his wife had a taste in charitable matters. His last public donation was a gift of $10,000 toward the public hospital at the Central Palace. Another recent gift was $10,000 to the Brotherhood of St. Andrew.

The Royal Society of Arts recently presented Lord Strathcona with the Albert Medal in recognition of his services toward the improvement of railway communication in Canada.

Wife's Death Great Blow. The death of Lady Strathcona in November last was a great loss to him, but even then he was not without the commissioner's force of will asserted itself, and he lost no time in recovering himself. A week later he attended the Hudson's Bay meeting. This was his last appearance in public.

He was the laziest, or rather, the amiable leaves of an unfeeling life, and his death, which has made his name a name of a name and a name.

Washington, D.C., Jan. 20.—The President was in the hall of the crowded chamber at 12.30, while the speaker, Mr. Clegg, and gave him prolonged applause and cheer. The President took his place at the speaker's desk and began reading promptly at 12.30.

THRILLING CAREER OF "THE MAN OF IRON"

The imagination can scarcely imagine a more thrilling career than that closed by the death of Lord Strathcona. "The man of iron," his life was a story of adventure, of the history of the West's development, and of the struggle for the Hudson's Bay Company's success. While Winnipeg was the center of much of his tremendous creative genius, the whole of the Dominion was his field of operations and many lines of thought and industry.

Born at the time when Europe was just settling down after the agony of the great Napoleonic wars, and coming to Canada when the Dominion was not dreamed, and when even there was little semblance of unity among the provinces, 1823, the first through and participated in a series of events in some ways the most remarkable in the history of civilization.

When Donald Smith, aged eighteen, left his home in Morayshire, and sailed for Canada, he was the first of a line of men who were to make the Dominion what it is today. He was just being crowned and the first steamship was preparing to cross the Atlantic. It took him six weeks to do a journey which is now accomplished in a few days.

The revenues of the country were not worth speaking about at the time. There was no railway across the continent, and the Hudson's Bay Company, administered by the Honorable Company of Merchants of the Hudson's Bay, was the great power in the Dominion.

Into this wilderness went Donald A. Smith in 1843. After ten years in the St. Lawrence port he entered Labrador, and established a reputation as a trader in pelts, and as a hunter. He was a man of iron, and his life was a story of adventure, of the history of the West's development, and of the struggle for the Hudson's Bay Company's success.

His lordship and his wife had a taste in charitable matters. His last public donation was a gift of $10,000 toward the public hospital at the Central Palace. Another recent gift was $10,000 to the Brotherhood of St. Andrew.
